

A Brighter Future for Women

Join your colleagues for a free money and super webinar

Hear from AustralianSuper experts who will take you through some simple, actionable steps which could help make a big difference to your financial future.

On average, women retire with almost half the super of men† due to a number of reasons — including lower earnings, part-time employment and time out from the workforce. And as women tend to have a longer life expectancy than men, it's all the more reason to make sure your super will last.

On average, women retire with half the super balance of men†
